Conscientious men are scarce

To the Editor:

A man with initiative governed by his conscience is hard to find in the world of politics. Waco has found such a man in Vic Fezell — a man who guards his tongue against slander while being the object of it.

The media is quick to plant the seed of suspicion and doubt in its readers' minds. There are a few of us who aren't colorblind, and recognize "yellow journalism" when we see it.

I challenge you as an unbiased newspaper to print my letter of support for our DA.
