Fezell guilty of doing job

To the Editor:

The television show "60 Minutes" has long been a favorite of worldwide audiences. Its reputation for integrity has been firmly established through the many investigations. Therefore, it is unlikely we would see these shows without their having been thoroughly documented.

With this track record, no one would dare dispute Harry Reasoner's statement, "Law enforcement officers in Texas have egg on their faces." Naturally, this disclosure was never expected and has drawn caustic comments. An attempt to change this dirty image is being made at the expense and harassment of District Attorney Vic Fezell and his family.

Fezell has long been criticized and singled out as not being "one of the good old boys." This reputation was attached to Vic when he and Truman Simon broke the Spence-Deeb case wide open after our local police force hung it out to dry.

Does doing your job to the best of your ability make one a criminal? If so, I'm sure Fezell would plead guilty because of the enviable record he has compiled in the short period of time he has been our district attorney.
